

"DOCTORED" BOOKS.*Bookkeeper Ellis Charged with a Big Embezzlement.*Missing Collector Said to Have Been in the Conspiracy.*A Previous Robbery of Powell & Bro. Recalled.

Under the name of William C. Cooper, William E. Ellis, bookkeeper for Alexander B. Powell & Bro., poultry dealers, of Barclay street, was this morning arraigned in the Tombs Police Court on the charge of embezzlement. He will be given an examination in the same court before Justice Meade next Wednesday. Powell's lawyer asked for that much time in order to give the police a chance to arrest another man who is said to be implicated in the frauds. This man is a collector named William E. Farnham, of Connecticut, and it is believed he received the greater part of the stolen money.

Ellis, with the consent of the Powells, gave the name of Cooper when arrested, in order that he might not bring disgrace upon his family, and because he wanted to have his alleged partner in crime arrested with him. Had his own arrest become known, it was feared that the missing collector would take warning and fly. Even now he is in another State and out of the jurisdiction of the courts here.

Little of the real story came out in the police court, the Powells being particularly anxious to keep everything quiet, in hopes that they might be able to recover some of the stolen money. They do a large business, selling game to hotel proprietors and others all over this section of the country.

From what could be learned, it appeared that the missing collector collected bills amounting in all, it is claimed, to between $10,000 and $15,000. He divided this with Ellis, who as bookkeeper is said to have "doctored" the books so that the facts could not be known.

Ellis is a well-built, fashionably-dressed, intelligent man and is married. He seemed to feel his position keenly in court this morning. Until the present crookedness was discovered he had always borne an excellent reputation.

Powell Brothers seem to have had considerable trouble with their employees in the past, and the money they have lost runs up well into the thousands. The arrest of their bookkeeper now recalls a story which, when the facts were published over a year ago, caused no end of gossip.

In May, 1892, Game-Protector Robert Brown, of Staten Island, who arrested New Thomas Dixon for violating the game laws, appeared in the Tombs Police Court and obtained a search warrant for the New York Refrigerator Warehousing Company, 107 Murray street. Accompanied by Roundman Campbell, of the Tombs Police Court, he raided the place and found over 1,000 head of game, all of which were seized. It was against the law to store game during the close season, and it was estimated that the fines would foot up to about $27,000.

On the hearing which followed half the hotel men, poultry men and others were called as witnesses. It was found that the law had been violated by a score of people, but strangely enough, the full amount of the fine was not imposed. Instead of $27,000, the Warehousing Company paid $1,000, and all the captured game was destroyed. It was a matter of surprise to everybody how Gamekeeper Brown got such information about the Warehousing Company. He evidently knew the building just as well as any of the employees, and knew where to lay his hands on the game.

Powell Brothers, it appears, had also been in the habit of storing game with the Warehousing Company, and shortly after the time stated, they sent to that place for 5,500 worth of game which they wanted in a hurry. Not a single head of there could be found, not was their property among the quantity seized by the gamekeeper.

Ex-Inspector Steers then and charge of the Detective Bureau, and he detained Detective Sergeant Valley and Evanoff on the case. They at once suggested Mr. Powell's ex-bookkeeper, J. Nelson Benken, twenty-two years old, of 33 West Fifty-ninth street, and Henry Beekman, employed by Powell as a porter. Both had given up their positions some time before.

As it turned out, they actually had made off with the Powell game. Benken had sold most of it to the firm of Swan, Newton & Co., of Boston. All he gave the police out of the proceeds was $50. It was they who had given the information to Gamekeeper Brown, in order that he might be arrested.

Benken had been arrested shortly before the detectives took the case for sloping with his wife's young sister while his wife was visiting her mother in Philadelphia. He moved all his wife's furniture to a flat in Harlem, where he installed her sister. He was there arrested on his wife's complaint and incarcerated in the Jefferson Market Prison.

Beekman, the porter, was afterwards arrested and the two detectives played upon his fears by saying that Benken had turned informer. The porter then confessed, and both men were sent to the penitentiary for three and a half years.

They admitted having given Gamekeeper Brown the information upon which he called the Warehousing Company in the hope that Powell would be obliged to admit having stored game there during the close season.
